Waiting.

By John Burroughs.

Serene, I fold my hands and wait, Nor care for wind, or tide, or sea; I rave no more 'gainst time or fate,

For lo! my own shall come to me. I stay my haste, I make delays, For what avails this eager pace? I stand smid the eternal ways,

And what is mine shall know my face. Asleep, awake, by night or day, The friends I seek are seeking me ; No wind can drive my bark astray,

Nor change the tide of destiny What matter if I stand alone? I wait with joy the coming years ; My heart shall reap where it has sown,

And garner up its fruit of tears. The waters know their own and draw The brook that springs in yonder height; So flows the good with equal law

Unto the soul of pure delight. The stars come nightly to the sky; The tidal wave into the sea ; Nor time, nor space, nor deep, nor high, Can keep my own away from me.

VARIETY.

A Yankee journalist has offered a reward of $1000 for a tale that will make his hair stand on end. Before ambitious authors enter the field as competitors, it may be as well to understand that the generous journalist is perfectly bald.

A Georgia man, who was under examination recently to demonstrate his fitness for serving upon a jury in a murder case, was told by the judge to look upon the prisoner. He did so, and said, "Yes, judge, I think he's guilty." He was excused from serving.

When a youth takes his first draught of whiskey straight, and doesn't feel as if his eyes were changed into watering-pots his destiny, in the language of the poet, "is not," and though you ring "The Drunkard's Warning" at him from a thousand temperance belfries, the probabilities are that he will take another drink with the first man who asks him.

Paris paper: A man borrows 800 france of friend, for which he signs eight notes for 100 francs each, payable monthly. The first falls due and is protested. "This is rather promising for the others," remarked the lender. "O, they will be protested likewise," calmly replies the debtor. "Then why on earth did you sign the notes?" "So that the shock would not be so great to you. You will only lose a hundred francs at a time this way."

Long Branch letter: A widow of my acquaintance at the Ocean was emphatic on the horrible figure that the loveliest woman must cut while bathing. I remarked that the Queen of Love and Beauty was fabled to have sprung from the foam of the sea, and that she must have been charming. "Oh, yes; but she had nothing on. I should look charming—" Here her speech came to a sudden halt and observing roses blooming all over her face, I said, "I have no doubt of it" and walked away.

AN UNREASONABLE REQUEST .- Mrs. Scroggins -Well, Betsey, and how be you this day? Mrs. Jones—Bad, Martha; very, very bad. I'm a-goin' Martha—a-goin' to the other land! Mrs. Scroggins—Well, Betsey, if it's true and yer must go, you'll see my 'Enery up there; tell 'im I keeps a mangle, and t' childer is well,

Mrs. Jones (peevishly)—Nay, nay, Maria, yer can't expect as I can go swanderin' about the clouds a-lookin' for your 'Enery, wi' my bad leg !- London Fun.

Harry (whose papa has just gone to the school for yeomanry officers at Aldershot)—" Mamma what will papa learn at this school?" Mamma —" He will be taught how to command a troop and a great many things you could not under-stand; but there is one thing they teach Harry (impressively) which I very much wish I could teach you-to do exactly as you are told." Harry (reflectively)-" Papa won't mind that much; he always has to do it at home." Harry can't think why mamma is so cross all day; wonders, privately, if she will have to go to school next; (strictly private) hopes so .- Judy.

Chicago Tribune: Two young women met yesterday. They had not seen each other for two months. The following conversation ensued: "Been to Long Branch. Where were you?" " To Saratoga. Any offers?" "Yes, nine; two of them counts. You have any?" "Thirteen. One was an earl." And that girl who had been to Long branch went home and shed bitter tears of vexation, though the fact of the matter was that they had neither of them had any offers at all, and both knew it. She has taken a solemn oath that another time she will let the other girl speak first, and raise her out of her boots, if she has to invent a Russian prince to do it.

They had a wedding in West Virginia the other day, at which a large crowd was present, and everything went off nicely, including bride and bridegroom, who took the train for Baltimore on a tour as soon as the cake had been passed around. The mother of the bride was observed shedding tears very freely, and wishing to console her, one of the guests approached, and remarked :

"Oh, I wouldn't feel bad over it, Mrs .-I think Jennie married a good man." "Yes, I guess so," replied the mother wiping each side of her nose on her hand, "but she is high-tempered, and they'll soon have a row, and I never thought to put that old harness straps in her trunk, and tell her to hit him with the end that's got the buckle on it !"

LOCKED AND BOLTED .- He got home about two o'clock a. m. from looking at the Centennial through a glass. He was very careful to make no noise, and especially particular to lock and bolt the front door, as she was first up in the morning, and being timid, was sure to look at the fastenings. At breakfast she said to him, "Drunk again, last night!" "Drunk?" he ejaculated, with well-assumed amazement. "I didn't know but that you were. I noticed the front door was open." "Open!" he again ejaculated, this time with genuine astonishment, but still with confidence, "I don't see how that can be, for I both locked and bolted it." "Yes," said she dreamily, "it was both locked and bolted, but about six inches open." The unhappy man groaned .- Danbury News.

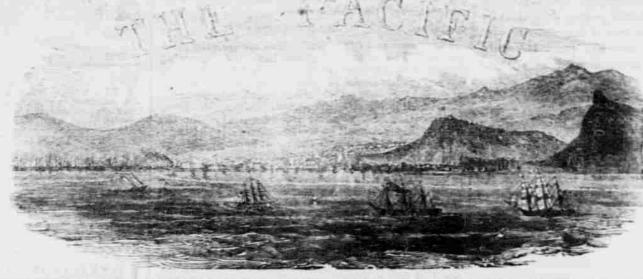

August Belmont had, and has I believe, for private secretary a young man who gave him offence by writing a letter differently from what that eminent banker had directed. Belmont looked it over and blurted out : " D-n you, I've told you a dozen times how to do this, and you've done it wrong again." The secretary rose with dignity and said, "Mr. Belmont, you must not swear at me. I do not get salary enough to do work faithfully and be " How much do you get?" inquired the finan-

" $1,500 a year." " How much do you want?" " Including being sworn at?"

"Yes, including everything."
"$3,000 at least."

"Draw $3,000 hereafter, d-n you, and copy my letters exactly as I direct;" which shows me that some men are willing to pay for luxuries. It may be said of Belmont, in scriptural phrase, that curses clothe him like garments, for he has a habit of swearing .- New York Letter.
